

Changes to the Zone Tax Offset (Fly-In Fly-Out Workers)

Since 1 July 2015 the law changed about who is eligible to claim the zone tax offset. Previously, you had to either reside or work in a remote area. Now, under the new law, your usual place of residence must be within a remote area in order to be eligible for the offset. For example, if your usual place of residence is in Melbourne and you fly-in and fly-out to work in a remote area, you are no longer eligible for the offset.
